QUESTION 1

Read the passage (TEXT A) below and answer the questions that follow.

TEXT A

1 High school pupils from Gauteng World Cup host cities took time out to learn more about life skills, the environment and its conservation. More than 400 pupils from various schools were randomly chosen to take part in a week-long camp as part of the Department's water and conservation campaign. 2. 5 As part of the annual camp hosted by the Department of Water Affairs in Gauteng, this year's project included the World Cup theme, youth month and conservation. Pupils were able to watch the soccer spectacle in their camp at the Ithuba Community School in Ekurhuleni. 3. The pupils woke up at the crack of dawn every day and climbed a hill in the nature reserve. Once at the top they waited for the sun to rise and then sang 10 the national anthem. "This is a great experience, but I wish we did not have to wake up so early," said 17-year-old Thabiso Mokete. 4. One of his peers, Jacqueline Mbatha, said the camp had stimulated her interest in environmental studies. "I have learnt that for us human beings to survive, we need to look after our environment," Mbatha said. 15 5. They were taught about plants and animals, recycling, how to save water, and about the local plants and how to save them. They also had to go into a township and learn about water cleansing. The Department is in partnership with the Ekurhuleni Municipality and the East Rand Water Care Company. 6. Motivational speakers and life coaches were also invited to encourage the 20 youngsters. One of them was young businessman, Billy Bhembe. He had the pupils' undivided attention when he told them about how he had worked against all odds to become a successful businessman. "Do not let anyone stand between you and your dream. Anything is possible if you put your mind to it," Bhembe said. 25 [Adapted from: Sowetan, 25 June 2010]

JOURNEY FROM FEAR OF XENOPHOBIA

- 1. "Police! Police! Close the curtain! Close the curtain!" We pull the curtain behind the driver and lower our heads. A few quiet but tense minutes pass. The thumbs-up comes and the curtain is opened again to reveal the stark landscape of the Great Karoo on both sides of the runway.
- 2. In a scene similar to the festive season migration, scores of people carrying huge bags of luggage sit along the N1 highway heading north from Cape Town, hitching lifts from passing trucks and bakkies. However, the mood is tense, nothing like the jovial mood of the festive season.
- 3. Chikati is one of them. He looks on wearily as truck after truck roars past without stopping. He is hoping to be in Johannesburg at least by the following day, stay over at a relative's home and then catch a bus to Harare after that. But there are stories of people spending a whole day and night waiting for a lift and he's worried. His wife, Blessing, is at a busy garage, trying to arrange a lift.
- 4. The foreign nationals do not want to take the train for fear of being attacked. Also, many cannot afford the fare. Just after midday, as hopes for a lift begin to fade, Blessing calls her husband and explains that she's struck a deal with a truck driver.

TEXT C

THIS COUNTRY

What did the people say when the last fan walked home and the last journalist had written his/her last article against his/her defeated national team and when the last vuvuzela had parted its last sad sound? What had this World Cup left for South Africa?

It not only gave jobs and skills and hope to thousands of local people. It gave an absolute deadline to South Africa for the introduction and improvement of all kinds of infrastructure – not just sports grounds, but roads and bridges, airports and bus lanes that would otherwise have not been built and which would benefit the country for decades to come. Above all, the World Cup gave this country something intangible but priceless: a deep sense of pride that it took on something difficult and did it well.

The sheer number of visitors — around a million — helped to open the eyes of the world to South Africa and its potential for trade and investment. Crime that was supposed to be one of the drawbacks of living here went down 90% in central Cape Town, and there was not a single incident of serious crime or violence in any of the fan parks.

Of course there were disappointments, and no one could pretend that the World Cup would solve the country's economic and political problems. But it offered a sense of unity and confidence to a place with a tragic past. Fifa took an inspired decision to give the World Cup to South Africa, and South Africa responded brilliantly.

THE TEMPTATION TRAP

- 1. Self-control is important as it helps one to unlearn behaviour that stands in the way of one's living a better life. For example, if one is an alcoholic, life passes by as one is not fully aware of what is happening because one is always drunk. We often hear of famous people who could not say no to temptation. We have read about how their failure to 5 say no messed up their lives.
- 2. Nompilo Buthelezi, a life coach, says this is because they did not apply self-control. Giving in to temptation has serious outcomes and some actions may cost one financially, while others can destroy one's life. "Self-control keeps one's mind at peace, helps one to live one's life 10 honestly and assures one that there is nothing to fear," says Nompilo.
- 3. Lack of self-control is destructive and addictive. There are many people who do not have friends because they cannot control their emotions. They say what they want to without thinking of the outcomes. Nompilo concludes by saying that in learning how to build self-control, one needs to analyse one's life and identify where one needs to apply more self-control.

QUESTION 8: UNTO DUST – Herman Charles Bosman

I have noticed that when a young man or woman dies, people get the feeling that there is something beautiful and touching in the event and that it is different from the death of an old person. In the thought, say, of a girl of twenty sinking into an untimely grave, there is a sweet wistfulness that makes people talk all kinds of romantic words. She died, they say, young, she that was so full of life and so fair. 5

She was a flower that withered before it bloomed, they say, and it all seems so fitting and beautiful that there is a good deal of resentment, at the funeral, over the crude questions that a couple of men in plain clothes from the landdrost's office are asking about cattle-dip.
