Read the story below about the San people and highlight all the homonyms.

The San people

At night, the San build a fire to keep warm. They sit on the ground and tell stories about animals by the light of the fire. They use their hands to mimic things as they speak, such as the branch of a tree, a flying bird or a hunter pulling a bow. When the stories are over and all that remains of the fire are the glowing coals, the San lie down on animal hides and go to sleep.
